CHAIRMAN'S INTRODUCTION

Dear Delegates,

The Cadwallader lectures have a long tradition of addressing issues of immediate and long-term significance in international maritime law and regulation to guide those interested in making and applying good law.

In line with this, the subject chosen for the 11th Cad debate takes the theme of the 10th event 'Lawmaking and Implementation in international shipping' a step further.

In all industries, consultation and constructive communications between regulators, politicians, and industry leaders prior to regulatory and legislative changes are vital. It is especially so in shipping, given its complex nature and international environment.

The structure, quality and timing of communications between politicians, regulators, the European Commission and the shipping industry are of immense significance in creating laws and regulations which are internationally acceptable, effective and well founded.

Our panel at this event will debate whether the present state of communications is satisfactory and if not, what is the missing link and the best way forward.

We hope that the discussions tonight will mark the beginning of a move towards enhanced and comprehensive co-operation in the future over regulation.

Thank you for your support.

Dr Aleka Sheppard
Chairman, LSLC Maritime Business Forum

LSLC - MARITIME BUSINESS FORUM

The core of the Centre's raison d'être is to encourage, facilitate and reinforce high quality in maritime services for all sectors of the shipping industry through continuing professional education. The Centre:

- Delivers monthly lectures, seminars and annual events of the highest standard in all aspects of maritime law, international conventions, insurance, finance, regulation and related subjects
- Informs and advises on current legal issues and global problems affecting maritime commerce and the practice of maritime law
- Brings together at its seminar and lecture events experts from multidisciplinary areas in the commercial and legal practice of shipping, whose knowledge is essential to the development of maritime law
- Challenges unworkable law and regulation and thereby promotes their reform
- Promotes dialogue between the industry and regulatory bodies at a neutral forum by highlighting the concerns of the industry about impractical regulation

The Centre has pursued these objectives since its inception in 1995. In 2009, it moved from the academic environment of University College London to the City of London at International House, 1 St. Katharine's Way, with sponsorship from RTI Ltd. This has helped to strengthen its Maritime Business Forum role.

The Centre has nurtured excellent relationships with the International Maritime Organization, the European Commission, academic institutions and the London and international shipping communities. It will continue to play a pivotal role in the advancement of knowledge of industry sectors.

Coinciding with the 11th Cadwallader event, the Centre is pleased to announce the formation of its 'Young LSLC group' to encourage younger maritime practitioners in all sectors to stage their own educational events under the Centre's auspices. The aim is to give opportunities to the younger generation of shipping to show their talents by taking the lead in panels for discussion of practical and legal issues in maritime commerce, thereby promoting their career advancement and cross-fertilization of knowledge, which is essential in our multi-disciplinary industry.

Further, the Centre's events will become available from now on to our overseas members and the maritime community worldwide through a multimedia online platform (www.lslclectures.com), where the filmed events can be viewed together with presentations and research material, including legislation, media reports and educational tests.

IN HONOUR OF CAD'S CONTRIBUTION TO MARITIME EDUCATION

Professor Francis J J Cadwallader, known as ‘Cad’ to those who knew him well, taught at University College, London from 1963 to 1982 and continued at Cardiff University until 1992 when he sadly passed away. He was appointed to the Chair of Shipping Law at Cardiff University in 1976 and set up a Centre of Excellence with Professor Edward Brown in Maritime Law and Policy. He is remembered as a scholar for challenging the law and as a teacher for his enthusiasm in teaching and understanding the needs of students. He made a major contribution to the elevation of maritime law as an essential and legitimate part of contemporary legal education. These lectures are a tribute to his contribution.

THE CHAIRMAN OF THIS DEBATE

THE RT. HON. THE LORD HOFFMANN

Leonard Hoffman was born in South Africa; studied law at Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar; taught at University College, Oxford from 1961 to 1973; was called to the bar in 1964; became a QC in 1977; appointed as a High Court Judge in 1985; promoted to the Court of Appeal in 1992 and to the House of Lords in 1995. He retired from the Appellate Committee in 2009 but continues to sit as a Judge of the Hong Kong Court of Final Appeal and to practice as an arbitrator and mediator from chambers in the Temple.

Lord Hoffmann enjoys a reputation of an outstanding and, at times, controversial Judge challenging the law as well as European institutions when they go beyond their remit by laying down a "federal law of Europe".

THE KEY-NOTE SPEAKER

JAN KOPERNICKI

Jan Kopernicki is a member of the Shell Trading Executive Committee and a Director of Shell International Trading and Shipping Company.

Mr Kopernicki is responsible for Shell's international shipping activities. His global team manages Shell's oil tanker, LPG and LNG vessel portfolio, provides maritime services to all Shell businesses, advises on safety and environmental aspects of shipping, provides ship management for the Shell fleet and joint ventures, and manages nautical, offshore and LNG technical developments - including the design and construction of vessels and floating structures.

His 38-year career with Shell has included assignments in International Chemicals, Supply, Life Sciences, Finance, Marine, Corporate Planning, Total Quality/Change Management and e-business. Before joining Shell Trading he headed the shipping activity of Shell Oil Company, based in Houston.

Mr Kopernicki is active in a variety of shipping industry bodies. He is Chairman of the Oil Companies International Marine Forum (appointed in 2002), President of the UK Chamber of Shipping, and a Board member of the International Tanker Owners Pollution Federation and the UK P&I Club (both since 1998). He was recently appointed as Chair of Maritime UK.

In the OCIMF role he has fostered improvements in the safety of the international tanker trade and the protection of the marine environment working with governments, industry and in the framework of the International Maritime Organisation, a specialised agency of the United Nations.

In the last two years he has driven the coordination of navy/industry coordination to combat the pirate threat. This has involved national and international integration involving not only the FCO and MOD, but also NATO and allies. Prior to his nomination for the Presidency of the UK Chamber of Shipping he served on the Chamber Board from 1998 and has been a key proponent of steps to improve the reduction of greenhouse gases by the shipping industry. His Chamber role has encompassed significant support to Royal Navy activities and British shipping interests.

He is joint Chair of the UK Shipping Defence Advisory Committee together with the Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff, Royal Navy. This Committee coordinates defence aspects of commercial shipping with the RN and government departments. He is Trustee of the Board and Member of the Classification Committee of Lloyd's Register. He has recently been appointed as Chair of the Executive Board of the World Maritime University, established under the auspices of the International Maritime Organisation.

A Freeman of the City of London, he is a Trustee of the Board of the National Maritime Museum at Greenwich (since 2003) and a Younger Brother of Trinity House.

Mr Kopernicki was born in the UK in 1948 and educated at King Edward's School in Birmingham and the University of Leicester, where he graduated in Biological Sciences. He is a Fellow of the Society of Biology, a Chartered Biologist, and holds the Certified Diploma in Accounting and Finance of the Chartered Association of Certified Accountants.

Membership of the LSLC

LSLC, being a non-profit making organisation, is financially supported by membership fees and sponsorship - it welcomes and attracts a cross-section of membership.

Current fee structure:

UK Corporate	£ 1,950.00	Overseas Corporate	£ 310.00
Double Transferable	£ 650.00	Academic Institution	£ 550.00
Individual UK	£ 350.00	Individual Overseas	£ 130.00
Retirees UK	£ 125.00	Full-time Student	£ 50.00

Corporate members may send an unlimited number of staff members to each of the monthly public lectures, subject only to space availability.

Double Transferable membership is offered to small companies and allows any two representatives from such a company to attend the Centre's monthly events. Additional representatives wishing to attend will pay the standard attendance fee of £50.00.

Individual membership entitles the named individual to attend.

Delegates' attendance is recorded for the purpose of their continuing professional development required by the respective professional bodies to which they belong.

The Centre's programmes and courses offer a cost and time-effective continuing education service, all events being accredited by the Bar Standards Board and the Solicitors Regulation Authority. The Centre's events are open to non-members who can attend upon payment of the standard lecture attendance fee of £50.00.

For further details about membership of the Centre and its current and past Events Programmes, please contact the Centre's Manager, Gerard Matthews at: shipping@shippinglbc.com
